Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH)

Submitted by Dr. Vicky Stergiopoulos, Physician-in-Chief

This past year has seen many initiatives and milestones at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health.

With the completion of the third phase of its redevelopment, CAMH has now consolidated all clinical services at the Queen Street Campus, offering state of the art facilities to support treatment and recovery from mental illness, .

In addition to developing and offering wellness supports and practice standards in the context of the pandemic, and successfully scaling up virtual care, this past academic year also saw the launch of the Centre for Complex Interventions, the first of its kind in Canada, aiming to support the design, implementation and rigorous evaluation of novel interventions to address the needs of people living with mental illness and addictions.

Finally, this past year saw the recruitment of several clinician scientists, including:

- Dr. David Castle, inaugural Director of the Centre for Complex Interventions
- Dr. Jamie Feusner, leading scientist in anxiety and other disorders
- Dr. Ben Goldstein, Director of the Centre for Youth Bipolar Disorder, and
- Dr. Daisy Singla, the first womenmind scientist, focused on women's mental health.
